EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Keep the town clean—and, ditto, yourself.

Campaign issues, we note, are usually made for campaigns.

The political pot is boiling so hard it is spilling all over itself.

"Weary Willies" are anything but weary when a square meal is in sight.

The field of journalism contains a few journals and a lot of waste paper.

Weighing your words is all right, provided they are worth weighing.

War still wages at the front in Europe and over the back fence in America.

There are so many crooks in the road of life that most people prefer to cut the corners.

Sunshine is health, but the shady spot of a tree is darned comfortable on a hot day.

"Most people act natural while asleep," avers an exchange. Including, we might add, the snore.

We are frank to admit that dead men tell no tales, but a lot of tales are told about them after they are dead.

The ass that brays is not half so assinine as the one that makes suggestive remarks about women on the public streets.

Counting chickens before they are hatched is a pleasant pastime, provided they do not croak in the pipping.

A city exchange displays prominently a column entitled, "Where Club Women Are." Human beings are not mentioned.

It is hard for a 22 calibre bullet to penetrate the hide of an elephant, or for patriotism to get beneath that of the average American financier.

A few citizen soldiers who thought they were going to the border on a picnic are now making a picnic of themselves in their efforts to get back.

Former Governor Hanly of Indiana has been placed by the prohibitionists among the notables who have been notified of their notability. He survived the shock.

WHEN A FELLOW KNOWS IT ALL.

There are but few country towns in existence but what have some one or more persons who "know it all." That is, they fondly imagine they know it all and most people give them credit for being better posted on everything and everybody than their neighbors are.

But are they? The fellow who is a "know it all" is also most generally a free talker. He trades information for information, gossip for gossip, and scandal for scandal. Thus it is that he is often able to impart certain unimportant information to his associates in a "strictly confidential manner," giving the impression that he has been in close touch with the powers that be.

But when you sift it down he has simply passed along, with embellishments of his own, information that is more or less of a public nature, and which would have reached the public in the usual routine in the course of a few days.

As a matter of fact, the know it all man seldom knows in advance of the really important affairs of life or of the commercial world, for no one cares to impart such information to the one who knows it all and tells all he knows.

Do not tie to the man who knows it all, for in all probability he knows less than you.

PAYING OTHER PEOPLE'S BILLS.

When you contract a bill in commercial life you pay the debt and do not ask others to pay it for you.

The same, however, can not be said of congress or the government of the United States.

There are thousands of men serving in the National Guard regiments on the border who have left families or dependent relatives behind without the necessary means of sustaining life while the bread winner is away serving his country.

In many cases the business employers of these soldiers have voluntarily been paying their employees their salaries while they are with the army. In such cases the families do not suffer, but it is a hardship on the employer.

In other cases the dependent families are supported by local contributions, which amounts to nothing less than charity.

Is this right?

Should the government of the United States, the richest nation in the world, expect the dependent families of its soldiers to be supported by private charity or starve to death?

Is a system that permits such conditions to exist conducive to patriotism on the part of the young married men of the country?

It is not.

As it stands today a few patriotic employers and private citizens are bearing the burden that should be placed upon the shoulders of all of the people through means of general taxation.

When the welfare of the nation requires the placing of an army in the field the expense of such an army, of every nature, should be borne from the public funds, and no individual citizen should be asked or expected to pay more than his just portion.

It is within the power of congress to right this wrong if it so desires, and for the sake of our young men in the ranks, of their families at home, and for the sake of common decency, it is to be hoped that once congress will not shirk its plain duty.

TODAY AND TOMORROW.

In every town and community there are two classes of young boys, and possibly our town is no exception to the rule.

The gilded and pampered youth looks with disdain upon the boy who starts life in an humble capacity and picks up a few nickles by running errands and selling papers and polishing shoes.

Yet a few years hence the newsboy or bootblack may be the head of some great commercial enterprise, and the pampered youth may be filling a fifteen dollar a week clerkship in his employ.

The same may be said of young girls, and even of some who are not so young. Caste estranges the well to do from the poor and needy, and the cold shoulder is substituted for the helping hand.

Years hence, though, the needy girl may be the wife of one of the greatest men of the nation, while the girl of caste is still longing for most any kind of a man.

Too many of us preach democracy in public and practice autocracy in private life.

We tell others what to do and forget to do the same things ourselves.

We live wholly in today and forget that tomorrow will ever exist.

And for the follies of today we pay dearly in the years to come.

Honesty, integrity, perseverance—these are the real assets of life, more golden in their value than all of the caste distinctions in existence.

Young men and young women who make the most of their opportunities today never want for their hearts desires tomorrow.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
We have never known a case of Catarrh cured by any other medicine. It is the only medicine that cures, and its only action is to cure. It is the only medicine that cures, and its only action is to cure. It is the only medicine that cures, and its only action is to cure.

The Best Laxative.

To keep the bowels regular the best laxative is outdoor exercise. Drink a full glass of water half an hour before breakfast and eat an abundance of fruit and vegetables, also establish a regular habit and be sure that your bowels move once each day. When a medicine is needed take Chamberlain's Tablets. They are pleasant to take and mild and gentle in effect. Obtainable everywhere. -Adv.

CONTROLLED BY SOUND WAVE

Engineer Has New Idea for Controlling the Death-Dealing Devices Employed in Modern Warfare.

Lovers of opera, or otherwise, who have had the pleasure, or otherwise, of hearing some of the most modern music, have come to realize that it has other attributes than that of soothing the savage breast. But to blow up a battleship by means of a Strauss dissonance or a Wagner overture, to nip off prowling submarines with a Verdi cadenza, or to make a mine-strewn harbor safe for your own ships with the tender notes of a Schubert lullaby seems another matter.

Expressed somewhat after the fashion of vers libre, that is more or less the results that are expected from an invention demonstrated to the writer. Lieut. Stiles M. Decker of the Pacific coast artillery is the inventor of a device that he believes will go a long way toward revolutionizing our coast defense. Patents have been applied for and preliminary tests have shown conclusively, it is said, that control of underwater mines may be successfully maintained through sound waves for firing, testing or rendering the mines neutral. It is believed to be the first time that the energy of sound has been used as a means of controlling the action of a source of energy.

The fact that mines have to be either controlled from the shore or by means of wires or else planted loose so that they will explode on contact has long been a source both of expense and trouble, according to Lieutenant Decker. The cable to the mines, when this is used, is very expensive and becomes useless in the course of a few years. Also it is not a very difficult matter under certain conditions for it to be destroyed by an enemy, thus rendering the mines useless. The mines that are simply planted with no further means of control may become as dangerous to the ships of this country as they are to those of an enemy.

If there could be some means of controlling them from the land without the necessity of any actual physical connection the advantages are so apparent that they need no enumeration. After considering a number of possible solutions Lieutenant Decker conceived the idea of using sound waves, which, as is well known, can be carried under water. With this as a working basis he has built up his theory of making a mine that will be controlled by a series of musical notes.

Selecting the Camp Site.

Unless you know your country well, do not rush to make camp on arrival, but take enough time to hunt up a good comfortable location. If there are any guides to be had, ask their advice, and the small charge they will make to show you some of the best places will be more than repaid in extra satisfaction. The most important requirements are sufficient firewood and good drinking water. It is not a great task to go some distance for water, but the wood must be close at hand. If possible, select a location where the morning sun will shine directly on the tent. This is for two purposes; to keep the camp dry, and to get everyone up while the coffee and pancakes are hot. It is well to have the camp partially shaded after ten o'clock in warm weather and enough trees about to break the force of the wind, not that there is any danger of a tent blowing down when pitched in either manner described below, but continuous strong winds become very tiresome and make the possibility of food warm almost an impossibility. Moderate breezes are most desirable for keeping away flies and cooling the tent.—Field and Stream.

Education by the "Movies."

Though motion pictures may never supplant the schoolmaster, they are already supplementing his work, and make it possible to facilitate teaching by illustrating of a varied and effective kind. Not least important is the aid that may give the practicing doctor and surgeon, especially in rare and difficult emergencies. The perfection reached in this new art was demonstrated in motion pictures of intricate operations lately shown the New York County Medical Society. It was noted could be seen more clearly than when viewed directly in the ordinary clinic amphitheater, for the pictures were taken from the best viewpoint. With films from the great surgical centers of the world collected as a part of the medical library, the local operator suddenly confronted with a strange case may promptly find needed details of new or special operations by referring to the stored pictures.

Dogs Among the Flyers.

When Lieutenant and Mrs. Theodore Marburg, Jr., arrived in this country recently they brought with them a little Scottish terrier, Jockomoe, which is one of several of the breed called "aviation hounds" by the British forces along the war front in France, where they figure largely in the aviation campaign.

The little canine fier has a short, low-lying body, a long nose, with rough, wiry, black hair, streaked with white, and a pair of brilliant eyes that express a wealth of intelligence. Marburg said Jockomoe and the others of his breed in the camp are trained to guard the hangars and give warning when a hostile aeroplane makes its appearance.

These dogs make flights with the aviators and hold the waste, spanners and other tools in their mouths when the aviators have occasion to make repairs or adjustments.

Liver Trouble.

"I am bothered with liver trouble about twice a year," writes Joe Dingman, Webster City, Iowa. "I have pains in my side and back and an awful soreness in my stomach. I heard of Chamberlain's Tablets and tried them. By the time I had used half a bottle of them, I was feeling fine and had no signs of pain." Obtainable everywhere. -Adv.

Give it attention, avoid exposure, be regular and careful of your diet, also commence taking Dr. King's New Discovery. It contains Pine-Tree Antiseptic Oil and Balsam. Is slightly laxative. Dr. King's New Discovery eases your cough, soothes your throat and bronchial tubes, checks your cold, starts to clear your head. In a short time you know your cold is better. Use over 10 years. "Cured"

Mrs. Jay McGee, of Stephenville, Texas, writes: "For nine (9) years, I suffered with womanly trouble. I had terrible headaches, and pains in my back, etc. It seemed as if I would die, I suffered so. At last, I decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and it helped me right away. The full treatment not only helped me, but it cured me."
